

A TALE OF THEOSOPHY.

Strange Story of the Marriage of Seales' Wife to Edward Bruce.

NO DIVORCE KNOWN TO EXIST.

Seales' Reason for Claiming the Diamond Assumed to Be That He Was Related to It by Marriage—Remarkable Story of Mixed Relations.

New York, June 16.—"Truth is stranger than fiction" is a saying old enough to go on crutches. No one thought of believing the startling series of events narrated in Willkie Collins, "Moonstone."

Yet behind the revelations in the Orange diamond case, as brought to the attention of the public by the arrest of Jeweler Charles Seales and his arraignment in the Tombs police court on Saturday, charged by lithographer Joseph W. Carroll with having stolen the stone, which is valued at $50,000, lies a story sufficiently extraordinary to excite one's incredulity.

The story comes, however, from an authentic source and is undoubtedly true, though replete with remarkable incidents. It has to do with theosophy and a platonic affection and the marriage of a man to the wife of a complainant husband.

What will strike people as exceedingly strange about the affair is the fact that the reputed owner of the big diamond, Mrs. Madeline Bruce, the wife of Edward M. Bruce, was formerly the wife of Charles Seales, the man on trial for refusing to give up the stone.

LIVED AT THE FLORENCE.

Mrs. Bruce is a pretty and very attractive woman. She is now about thirty. A few years ago, when she was Mrs. Seales, she lived with her husband at the Florence, the handsome apartment house at Fourth avenue and Eighteenth street. Their apartment was No. 36, and cost Mr. and Mrs. Seales $1,800 a year.

About this time young Edward M. Bruce came to New York from Baltimore, where he had been the private secretary of Robert Garrett, then president of the Baltimore and Ohio railroad. Here he entered into partnership with Mr. Seales, their place of business being at Eighteenth street and Broadway.

Bruce was an attractive fellow. His parents were Scotch but he was born in Italy, and he could sing Italian songs with fervor. His voice was very musical. He was less than thirty-five years of age. His brother in England is reported to be Sir John Bruce.

Naturally the Seales were charmed with the new partner, and invited him to come and live with them at Florence. Subsequent events make it appear that when Bruce came in at the door Mrs. Seales' love for her husband flew out at the window.

HE WAS A THEOSOPHIST.

Mr. Seales was the secretary of the Theosophist Society of this city, which at one time had rooms on Union Square. Possibly Mrs. Seales had never agreed with her husband's views, and possibly also the fact that Baltimore was once her home may have caused her to look kindly at Bruce.

Mr. and Mrs. Seales had many friends and entertained lavishly. Their friends were those of excellent social station. With one and all of them young Mrs. Seales was the greatest sort of a favorite, and was always most circumspect in her conduct and demure in her manner.

About a year ago last January Mr. Seales announced that his wife's health was in such a state that he thought a trip to Europe would do her good. It so happened that at the same time Mr. Bruce's business called him abroad also.

Thus it was that early in January Mrs. Seales and Mr. Bruce stood upon the deck of a stanch Canard surrounded by a host of their friends and acquaintances.

Mr. Seales was there, of course, and was one of those who helped to fill the cabin of his wife and that of Mr. Bruce with the rarest of flowers. Then the steamer sailed away as merrily as steamers ever sailed away in the month of January.

SHE MARRIED BRUCE.

Mrs. Seales never came back—that is, as Mrs. Seales. After about a year or less word came from the other side that Mrs. Seales had married Mr. Bruce. This was received with vast astonishment, in view of the fact that nothing had been heard about any divorce, either real or alleged. People who had known the Seales began to look at each other and to do a little wondering. While in London Mr. Bruce came across the Orange diamond and bought it as a present for his wife.

It glittered at her white throat when she and Mr. Bruce sailed back to this country. They returned by way of Canada, and that is how the diamond landed without paying any duty.

Perhaps it really belonged to Mrs. Bruce and perhaps it didn't. Anyway, while they were in Montreal the stone was sold to Mr. Carroll for $4,000, on condition that Mrs. Bruce should retain a three-quarter interest in it. Then Mr. Bruce arranged the matter of getting the stone across the line for the conditional purchaser.

Soon after their return to New York Mr. and Mrs. Bruce went to a well known Broadway hotel. There they began to entertain much as Mrs. Bruce did when she was Mrs. Seales.

OTHER STRANGE FEATURES.

One of the strangest things about one of these little dinners was that among the guests about the board was Charles Seales himself.

But the mystery of the affair of the Orange diamond is nothing if not deep, no one need be surprised at learning that the very pretty young woman at Mr. Seales' side was regarded by the rest as his affianced bride. The young lady was a Miss Salisbury, daughter of Dr. James H. Salisbury, who resided at Navarre flats.

It was an odd party indeed, and one can hear the chink of the glasses and the merry hum of conversation while Mr. Seales smiled kindly at his former wife and gratefully at his old partner, who still retained an interest in the firm, not having withdrawn all the money he had invested.

What the others thought of it all does not appear, but it is to be hoped that nobody called the fair Madeline Mrs. Seales by mistake. No proof the divorce has yet shown up, but Mrs. Bruce is Mrs. Bruce fast enough, for she exhibited her marriage certificate to a friend in a somewhat ostentatious way.

NOW IN EUROPE.

Dr. Salisbury and his daughter, of course, thought it was all right. He is also a theosophist and he and his daughter are at present in Europe in the interest of the Theosophist Society, having gone there prior to the death of Madame Blavatsky.

These little dinner parties, with a box at the theatre later on, continued until Mr. and Mrs. Bruce packed their trunks and went to Seattle, Wash., where a syndicate represented by Mr. Bruce has important business interests.

The diamond stayed behind in New York, remaining in Carroll's hands, except when it was in the big safe at Simpson's, where it was placed by Carroll's brother.

When it did come to pass that Mr. Seales got a chance to try to sell it, there can be little doubt that, knowing the circumstances, he must have considered himself to be in a measure related to the big stone—by marriage, at least.

This probably accounts for his inclination to resist Carroll's claim to the diamond, for nobody believes Mr. Seales ever thought for an instant of stealing it. He is said to be a member of the Produce Exchange in good standing.

Mr. Seales' friends who spoke on the subject all said that they regretted to mention his affairs at all, but felt that if they were to be made public it would be better to have the facts divulged correctly. One and all begged not to be quoted in the matter.

At the Florence I was informed by the clerk in charge that the Seales had kept very much to themselves, and all he knew was that they left before their leave was up, saying that Mrs. Seales' health required an immediate trip to Europe.

THE STONE'S CAREER.

From the above chronicle of the movements of this overgrown but somewhat off color stone in recent years it will be noticed that it has had a very eventful career.

First, it is said to have been presented to Queen Victoria by the ladies of her Court. The Queen then sold it for the benefit of a charity hospital, and it fell into the hands of a Londoner, a Mr. Lawrence by name.

Next came Bridgroom Bruce, happy with his bride and their theosophic love. When he buys the diamond they sail for America, where they encounter Lithographer Carroll in Montreal.

Carroll pays enough to at least own an interest in and to get possession of the big stone. He takes it to his uncle—Simpson—who holds it for a short time and then Jeweler Seales is so unfortunate as to have it left with him long enough for him to sell it on memorandum. Then Inspector Byrnes gets it.

The New Ohio Mining Towns.

Stouffville Star.

A gentleman who has been in the Short Creek mining region for several days says that the Canadian mines have been "killed" up with thirty miners, and both Dillonville and Long Run are working full. The coal company is paying out every two weeks about $19,000, or about $40,000 per month. It is said that the merchants of Dillonville are selling more goods than those of Mt. Pleasant, and the homes and population of Long Run are greater than at Dillonville, but the latter is built up compactly while Long Run is a string town, over a mile long. A new depot is needed at Long Run, as more people get on and off trains at that place than from any other point from Bowerston to Warren, and many people hauling goods from Martin's Ferry rather than going down to Mt. Pleasant station over one of the worst roads in the country, and the Wheeling & Lake Erie is losing trade on this account.

THE COMING TROUSERS.

The Opportunity This Year Will Afford Women Who Want a Revolution.

New York Tribune.

Justly or unjustly women have long been the victims of a suspicion on the part of men of having a secret desire to adopt the masculine trousers as a part of their costume. Perhaps the suspicion has been unjust; certainly one thing in favor of this view of it is that they have never adopted trousers, a distinguishing characteristic of the sex being that it usually does what it has a desire to do.

On the other hand, woman has taken up every other article of man's dress except trousers and made it more or less her own, so may it be only natural that she should long for trousers as well? Besides, there are few men who have not heard vague, undefined rumors that more than one woman, in the utmost privacy of her chamber, while the masculine portion of the household has been absent down town, has made more or less successful experiments with the trousers of her brother or her husband.

These futile trials, when conducted with intelligence and a right understanding of the nature and limitations of trousers, have usually we believe, been satisfactory to the woman making them. We say when conducted with intelligence, having in mind the case of a lady prominently identified with the obtaining of the rights of her sex who once came out in a newspaper article strongly attacking trousers on the ground, mainly, that they were highly uncomfortable.

An investigation set on foot by a crafty and ungallant man revealed the fact that the lady, while experimenting with a pair of trousers belonging to her pastor, surreptitiously furnished her by the good man's wife, became confused in regard to their lines of construction and put them on wrong side before, her savage newspaper article following as a matter of course.

But we are drifting away of what we started to say. The Tribune has already mentioned the fact that business women, typewriters, salesgirls, cashiers, and so forth, will begin wearing trousers on the first of next June. This has been settled by the executive board of the Women's National Council, and it is said that many of the young ladies have even now begun to select materials and speculate as to patterns.

An idea instantly occurs to any one who has studied the subject. It is this: We have just shown that all women in their secret hearts (except the unfortunate lady spoken of in the preceding paragraph, who was the victim of a misconception and who could no doubt be set right) that all women, we repeat, in secret cherish a high regard for trousers.

This being so, and it being settled that business women will certainly adopt trousers in less than a year, will it not follow that all women will shortly be wearing trousers? It seems to us clear. The business women of the country are, we take it, the brainiest, prettiest and most progressive of their sex, and it would be only natural that the other women should follow them in the matter of dress.

In the case of men we find no particular distinction between the dress of the business man and, let us say, that of the clergyman, the college professor or the newspaper man. All wear trousers. We suspect that by a year from the first of August, or by October 1, 1892, at the outside, trousers will be universally worn by the women of this country.

When we spoke the other day of the impending change in business women's dress, we were somewhat bewildered by the suddenness of it, and perhaps did not grow so enthusiastic over it as we should have done. Further reflection on the subject has made us think better of it, and we trust that we are now as heartily in favor of the change as it is possible to be. Indeed, so favorably are we impressed with the idea that did the change rest with us, we should be inclined to decree that it take place immediately instead of being delayed a twelvemonth. But the year will at least give the unfortunate lady of whom we have spoken an opportunity to place herself right, after which, we doubt not, she will withdraw her mistaken opposition and also come out in favor of trousers.

From a letter written by Mrs. Ada E. Hurd, of Groton, S. D., we quote: "Was taken with a bad cold which settled on my lungs, cough set in and finally terminated in Consumption. Four doctors gave me up, saying I could live but a short time. I gave myself up to my Savior, determined if I could not stay with my friends on earth, I would meet my absent ones above. My husband was advised to get Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs and Colds. I gave it a trial, took in all eight bottles; it has cured me, and thank God I am now a well and hearty woman."

DRY ITCHING SCALES THAT CRACKED AND POPPED OPEN.

LINDLEY, STUBBS & Co., N. Y., April 11, 1890. FOSTER, MILBURN & Co., Buffalo, N. Y.

GENTLEMEN:—When about ten or twelve years old I was troubled with cracks across the palm of my left hand, and when they healed the trouble broke out on my head, and every winter it would come out as a sort of tetter and make scales all over my head. I have not been free from it a single winter since, but it was worse last winter after I had the grippe, for then it came out in spots all over my body. I had a doctor examine me, and he told me that there was no cure for me. I got worse and worse. Scales would form over the sores and then dry out until they would crack and pop open, showing a watery matter. My skin was all like a dry wrapper. It felt as though it had dried on me. The scales were so bad that they would collect in the bed and have to be shaken out. It was about this time that I commenced using B. B. B. I was so bad that I was ashamed to take my hat off before a neighbor. I had used five bottles of another medicine without noticing any effect; but when I commenced to take B. B. B. the sores came out thicker than before, and they burned like fire; they were immense blotches of fire that would burn so I could not sleep. They were burned and itched can't be told, and I hope no one else may ever know from experience. The only relief I could get was from washing the sores with some B. B. B.

I stuck to the medicine and was on the fourth bottle before I could see that I was really better, although I knew that it was better to get such rottenness out of my blood than to have it stay there. I did say once that I wished I had never commenced taking B. B. B., but my wife encouraged me, and to-day I thank her for the advice, for I am in good health now, and I don't believe I ever would have been with my blood in such a condition as it was.

My scalp now is clean and clear of all scales and tetter, and on my body there are only small spots to show where the sores were, and these spots are free from scales. I do not doubt but that the cure will be perfect.

I am now on the sixth bottle and will take more until every spot is gone. I firmly believe that Burdock Blood Bitters will cure the worst disorders of the blood, for such certainly was mine.

Chad Wingate
